

Sports Medicine Program

Organized sports participation is growing like never before. 30 million kids and young adults take part in organized sports every year, and more than 3.5 million of them suffer a sports-related injury. While active play contributes to a child's health and well-being, children are more susceptible to injury and require specialized injury treatment.

We bring our A-game to every patient

When sports related injuries occur, the sports medicine team at Children's Hospital of Wisconsin is ready to help kids get healthy and stay healthy – and return to play as quickly as possible.

We take a wide ranging, family centered approach to treating pediatric sports injuries. Because our focus is strictly on kids, we bring an experienced understanding of young competitors to our advanced diagnosis and treatment of injuries in children and young adults, including:

- ACL injuries
- Back pain
- Concussion
- Dislocations
- Fractures
- Growth plate injuries
- Heat-related illnesses
- Overuse conditions
- Sports injury prevention
- Sports therapy for young athletes
- Sprains
- Strains
- Throwing injuries

Our Team

We provide access to a trusted team of professionals, including physicians, physicians assistants, physical therapists, nurse practitioners, and licensed athletic trainers, offering world-class diagnosis, treatment and management of pediatric sports injuries.

Rehabilitation Services

Kid's sports injuries also require special rehabilitation. Our rehabilitation services include physical therapy, bracing, guidelines for safe return to play, and injury prevention and education. Your young athlete will thrive in an environment specially designed just for him or her, with personalized treatment and activity plans.

Surgical Services

Children's Hospital features the most innovative surgical techniques and treatments available, with orthopedic surgeons rated among the Best Doctors® in America.

With state-of-the-art technology, robust preventive care and education, and a specialist team dedicated to the idea that nothing matters more than our children, you'll always know your star performer is in the very best hands.
